Hear from professionals from a variety of Oregon universities about educational pathways in climate and environmental sustainability!

Joe Bowersox
Willamette University

Joe Bowersox is Dempsey Endowed Chair of Environmental Politics and Law in the Department of Environmental Science at Willamette University. His research and teaching focuses on the nexus of human communities and complex ecosystems.

Erin Heim
Oregon State University

Erin Heim is the Associate Head Advisor and Enrollment Management Coordinator at OSU's College of Earth, Ocean, and Atmospheric Sciences.

Sarah Stoeckl
University of Oregon

Sarah is the Program Manager in the Office of Sustainability. She acquired her PhD from UO in 2012. She now fosters programs like Community for Environmental Leaders and the Sustainability Faculty Fellows program to support higher education in environmental realms.

Abigail Van Gelder
Portland State University

Abigail is the Executive Director at the Center for Entrepreneurship. Her marketing work is found in prestigious places like the Library of Congress. Currently, she motivates students to explore innovative ideas and helps implement events like the Cleantech Challenge at PSU.

Samuel Bell
Oregon State University

Samuel is the new director of OSU's sustainability department. With 15 years of experience, Sam has been advancing sustainability initiatives around the world such as building social enterprise programs in different parts of Africa and in the US.
